Here's just one example...

Reference Information

Organization: Mitsubishi Motors North America, Inc.

Document

Type: Technical Service Bulletin
Name: Water Leaking into Floorboard Area
Number: TSB-08-42B-005
Issued: September 2008

Description

Vehicles: 2004 – on Endeavor

Purpose:

Water leakage may occur at the floorboard due to the following possible conditions. Water in the floorboard can eventually saturate the silencers under carpet, causing a musty smell.

- Water may seep into the headliner due to leakage at the roof rail body seam. It may run out at the bottom of the "A" or "D" pillars into the floorboard area.
- Water may seep inside the door at the lower edge of the door's waterproof film, due to the butyl tape coming loose. This could occur at either the front or rear doors.
- Condensation from the HVAC can flow onto the carpet due to either a blocked HVAC drain or a deteriorated grommet seal between the HVAC and the bulkhead at the drain.
